APPOINTMENTS

"An appointment is a contract; if you break it you are not honest."—H. M. Stansifer.

Lack of appreciation of what time may mean to the other fellow is the cause of more broken friendships and more business failures than can be computed.

Some people in this day and age think they are privileged to make an appointment at one hour and then wander in half an hour later and expect a welcome awaiting them.

This is especially true of the small type of man who through some chance is in a big position. He thinks he is "the onions" as it is said in slang and then proceeds, to keep his appointments as he pleases, because he thinks the other fellows have to wait to get what they are after.

This is most unfortunate for that man, because he is showing his true caliber and the day is not far distant, when he is going to do the waiting. Success and dishonesty do not go hand in hand.

Stansifer has just about hit the nail on the head. Luncheons have been kept waiting because the speaker is late. Trains are missed because people don't start soon enough and trains are not by any means the only things that are missed.

If you make an appointment with a man, you are receiving some of his time whether the appointment is for his benefit or yours. Unless you are dishonest at heart you are going to keep that appointment or let him know far enough ahead of time that you cannot be there, so that he can make other arrangements.

We had an experience some time ago with a man who had complained to us that business was poor and that things were not going as they should.

A few days ago we discovered it was not going as it should. He made an appointment that was to be of mutual benefit. Half an hour after the appointed hour he showed up and was greatly perturbed because arrangements could not be made at once for him to carry out his part of the bargain for which he should have appeared thirty minutes before. He caused an inconvenience to a great number of people and we are willing to wager that of those people not one will ever attempt to depend on him again. People have a habit of remembering those things.

Appointments should not be made unless people expect to keep them.

Tia Juana Cleanup Follows Death of The Petet Family

(By Universal Service)

OTIS M. WILKES

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 11.—One notorious dive was closed up by the Mexican authorities and the jailer of the Tia Juana Quarter was arrested on a murder charge at the border resort this afternoon. Both official moves are the latest developments in Mayor Federico Palacios's determined drive against rampant vice conditions in Tia Juana, which have been dragged from the shelter of political protection by the tragic suicide pact of the family of Thomas Petet.

Thomas Petet, his wife and two pretty daughters ended their lives with gas in their San Diego home rather than face the disgrace of the brutal attack made upon the two girls, Clyde and Audrey, and which caused the arrest of chief of police Zenaido Llanos and six other Mexicans.

The cafe closed today by Mayor Palacios holds a reputation as one of the vilest dives in Tia Juana. It is owned by Pete and Luis Tia Juana and is said to have been operated for the sole purpose of luring American women into it where they have been "killed" and some of those who have suffered fates similar to those experienced by Audrey and Clyde Petet.

The cafe is only one of a score or more that are threatened by Padlock before March 1. Mayor Palacios told border officials today. In Tia Juana there are now 67 saloons, the majority of them

LIGHT FAILURE CAUSES PANIC

(By Universal Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Failure of the electric lighting system which plunged the county jail into darkness caused temporary panic among the guards and jailers tonight.

Coincident with the announcement that Governor Small had refused the tenancy to Jack Woods and Joseph Holmes, Drake hotel bandits scheduled to hang Saturday morning, the light in the jail had gone out. It was feared the wires had been cut. Emergency calls to nearby police stations brought a score of heavily armed officers who formed a cordon around the jail. Several minutes later the jail electrician discovered that a fuse had blown out.

BETTER ROADS ARE ADVOCATED IN TALK BEFORE REALTY BOARD

Lieutenant Governor Young Advocates Building of Better Roads

(By Universal Service)

BERKELEY, Feb. 11.—More and better highways throughout the state, forest conservation and proper water storage and distribution were urged in a speech by Lieutenant Governor C. C. Young, who addressed members of the Berkeley Realty Board at their annual banquet here this evening.

Problems, vital to the material welfare of California, according to Young, include the immediate construction of new highways.

"For the first time in fifteen years," said Young, "the building of new state roads has practically ceased in California. Our three highway bond issues have been expended. No new funds or sources of income have been provided for this purpose."

"This is the day of the automobile, and California, with 365 days each year when motor travel is possible, ranks second only to New York in her automobile registration. More than this, there are literally millions of visitors and potential home-seekers to whom the lure of good roads would prove a compelling attraction, but who are met at our very borders by main trunk highways, often almost inconceivably bad. As has been well said: 'It costs the state more to do without improved roads than it costs to provide them.' We have a large investment in our state highways, and we must protect that investment by all due diligence in the completion of our highway system."

"Our second great problem is forest conservation and the protection of the watersheds at the sources of our streams. When we consider that the forest areas and even the brush lands in our hills and mountains are absolutely essential in safeguarding the water supply of our state, we realize the criminal waste which comes from preventable fires, and from failure to co-operate with timber

Seven Bombs are Thrown at Gen. Rivera the Dictator At Barcelona

(By Universal Service)

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Revolution is brewing in Spain if advice reaching London from Madrid are credible. A junta of officers opposed to the regime of Gen. Primo De Rivera, the dictator, is said to have been formed within the army. The Spanish government is reported to be fully aware of the situation but is not inclined to precipitate matters by taking action. The government is "merely waiting for the revolutionaries to make the first move."

Reports that seven bombs were thrown at Gen. Rivera when he was at Barcelona recently are confirmed in the dispatches which assert that the syndicalists have made other attempts to assassinate the dictator.

PEACE IN DEBATE—AT LAST

The adoption of the protocol of the World Court by a decisive vote in the senate ends a controversy which has lasted now for some years. In view of the excitement and the hours consumed in arguing the subject, it may seem a rash prediction, but there are sober people who say that the element of controversy created the high light and now that it is an accepted fact the whole subject will become one of sober sincere, constructive discussion. Under the protocol as adopted the United States agrees to assist in the election of the judges and to contribute in part to the cost of maintaining the court. But through reservation it is distinctly stipulated that the court cannot act on American cases, except those submitted by American authorities, and further that the United States may at any time withdraw its adherence to this protocol.

The American government, wholly apart from the World Court, will continue advancing its own distinctly American theory of peace through treaties of arbitration, of which a considerable number have already been made, and its system of treaties of commerce and amity with which it has always safeguarded the rights of its citizens in their relations with the subjects of foreign nations, all of which are subject to acceptance by our senate.

Our joining is a worthy move for several reasons. First, it must be said we cannot very well continue to preach, as we have been doing the need of unity and peace in the world and ignore the one and only instrument which European countries have created for the accomplishment of this purpose. In addition it must be admitted we need membership in the court for our own protection. The time to protest against adverse action dangerous to American rights or equity, is at the moment the attack is made, not days after, and no way has yet been developed by which the United States is able to protect itself in such an emergency by merely peeking through the keyhole, or listening to the reports of unofficial observers. To safeguard America, our representatives must be sitting down, with a right to speak, not lurking outside a locked door. That is the whole story.

LIFE'S ARCHITECTURE

Ruskin had a characteristic theory regarding the degree of ornamentation on a building. The first requirement was that the decoration should be honest. No hidden, uncarved corners, continuing an open finely executed piece of work, could escape his severe censure. "It is not well," he said, "that the ornament should cease in the parts concealed; credit is given for it, and it should not be deceptively withdrawn."

The application of this theory to the lives of men and women in public life is coming to be inevitable. Whether their career lies in administrative office, or the moving picture screen, or whatnot, they cannot escape this severe scrutiny of the public judgment. Once the intimate side of a person's life, the side turned to his family and his intimate friends, is neglected, is allowed to grow selfish and careless, men begin to distrust the validity of the outer life. More and more the public requires worth of character now, as well as of talent.

Sincerity must be the keynote of daily living, as well as of architecture, to bring about successful and beautiful results.

Some Pages from American History

By VICTOR MORGAN

THE PEOPLE OF NEW SWEDEN

The people in the north countries of Europe were hardly enough mariners. They had set their faces to the west and sailed along the coast of America in the days of exploration and discovery. But they had sent no colonists here to lay a claim to any territory.

When the Norsemen had sailed to our shores in the early days of the fifteenth century, they had no claims to lands they sighted, or to harbors in which they anchored. Apparently they were content to be hardy mariners only. Colonization failed to interest them or their sovereigns.

But after a couple of centuries when the good king, Gustavus Adolphus was reigning, he decided that he wanted a colony in the New World. All the other European nations seemed to be grabbing off for themselves great slices of unclaimed territory, and he too would have a piece!

So toward the middle of the seventeenth century a ship of war pointed her prow to the west. She was loaded with Swedes and Finns. She was followed by a smaller vessel, also loaded with these Scandinavians.

Straight into the Delaware river sailed the two small boats. The men landed and were met, as colonists usually were, by a band of curious Indians.

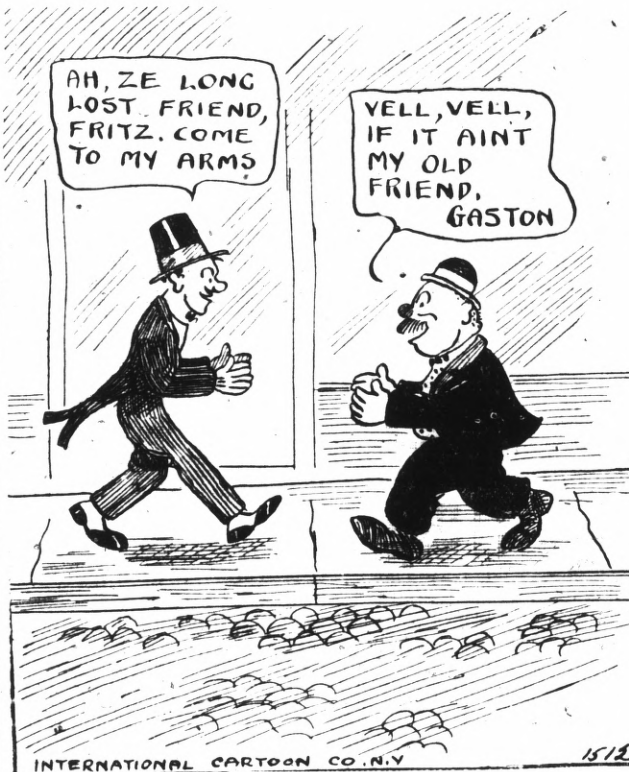

These new people, however, didn't drive the Indians away. They did better than that. They struck a bargain and bought a bit of land from the red men who owned it. They called the village that the built, New Sweden. Then they built a fort. The chief settlement was made near that city in Delaware that we call Wilmington.

Now the Dutch people of New Netherlands were near neighbors of the Swedes and they were not greatly pleased to have New Sweden intruders in this new country. So they armed their soldiers and sent a force against the Swedes.

The victory was easy, for most of the Swedes promptly took the oath of allegiance to the Dutch colony and the Dutch Republic.

Some time later William Penn took over the colony and both the Swedes and Dutch there were glad to remain under his government for it was liberal and free. The Delaware colony always had its own assembly, however, even when it was under the government of Pennsylvania.

SYNOPSIS
Molly Shannon, student in the State University, feels that she has compromised her life because she permitted Stephen Renfro, an effeminate expert, to kiss her, though he has not proposed marriage. Attending a concert with her landlady one evening, she is shocked to see Renfro in the company of "Molly's friend" Dillworth's daughter. With Renfro are Gregory Cochran, the "big lawyer," and others. Filled with humiliation and jealousy, she finds the remainder of the evening a nightmare.

At the first intermission, Molly made good her escape. That night was marked by a fiery cross. She never spoke to Stephen about it; never let him know even that she had gone to the concert. A poor ruse for saving the last shreds of her self-respect. Then, too, she did him justice. He had a right to go where he pleased and with whom he pleased. She had no hold on him other than his half-pitying, half-bantering kindness saw fit to acknowledge. He had, it was true, made love to her, beautiful, intense love; but not in any vulgar, tangible way that you could put your finger on and say he meant thus or so.

Then came the crisis. She turned from the telephone one morning with a rapt, luminous face. "Stephen has asked me to go to the theater with him," she said, trying hard to keep the tremulous exultation out of her voice, "tomorrow night!" Of a sudden, she grew numb. The receiver dropped from her hand.

When there was only silence, she proceeded hesitatingly. "My dear, I'm going to run the risk of having you think me a very tiresome, meddlesome old woman." She broke off and sat drumming her fingers absently against the desk. "About this Mr. Renfro—I feel I must speak to you." At the nanosecond, she somehow chilling inference of "this Mr. Renfro," Molly's heart took a sickening lunge.

"Of course none of us know anything about him—that's that matters so much"—she was looking not at Molly, but at the spring campus outspread beneath the window—"but I'm afraid the truth is none of us know him. He seems cynical, egotistical, a peacur. And then—there's the way he has behaved to you."

Molly's eyes were fastened on the fingers twisting in her lap. "Was that discussed at the faculty meeting, too?" she asked, faintly. "I'm afraid it was. You see, he's not really a member of the faculty at all, yet it appears he's been making that an excuse for not taking you on."

Molly leaned forward, her racked soul in her eyes. "But he has," she protested eagerly. Miss Brian nodded, still without looking at her. "I know—that's what I particularly wanted to talk to you about." She hesitated again, as a surgeon might hesitate to plunge the saving knife into warm, unanesthetized flesh. "About the play last night—you didn't suspect, did you, that I had invited Miss Dillworth and a half dozen of the rich society girls with whom he is constantly seen—before he invited you?"

Molly's face turned whiter than the handkerchief worried lines in her fingers. "Why—did they refuse?" The words came or small, convulsive ruts of breath. "They did not consider the play—quite decent. The social leaders of the town had pronounced against it, notably Mrs. Sarah Cochran, who strikes the note in such matters. Her son, you know, is on our board of regents with whom he is constantly seen—before he invited you?"

That afternoon she came to Molly's room with a letter in her hand. She seemed not quite her normal self, fustered and hurried as though she had just finished doing battle with some power unseen.

"The Lord has provided," she announced solemnly, and before Molly's incredulous eyes—she was always suspicious of some chicanery about answers to prayer—five crisp new ten-dollar bills were spread impressively upon the bed.

"Thirty dollars, Mrs. Parker digested absorbedly on the back of her letter as they rode down in the street car, would buy a very good suit; these were the days when a suit could be bought for thirty dollars. Five more would get a nice blouse, then five for shoes.

"Hum-m! that left only ten for a hat and gloves and maybe a pair of silk stockings.

CHAPTER X
"Uh-huh . . ." Stephen let out a prolonged, impressed whistle as she entered the parlor next evening, trying her level best not to look self-conscious. "Where did we come by all the glad rags?" Laughing, he caught her by the shoulders and revolved her slowly at arm's length.

"Do you like them—really?" she asked anxiously. She had known at once that there was something; he was not entirely satisfied. Perhaps, after all, the shape of the hat—she hadn't felt sure about that.

But his hearty tone belied the critical cast in his eye. "Looks like a million dollars, doesn't she?" He turned to the little fairy god-mother, who hadn't for the life of her been able to resist peeking in to see how he was taking it.

That evening was one of Molly's brief seasons of perfection. She and Stephen departed and returned in a taxi—unheard-of elegance among the girls, who were gazing awestruck from upstairs windows. Stephen was resplendent in a full evening dress, just as he had been

Gideons are Told Of Trip Around The World in 1888

The meeting of the Gideon club last night in the First Baptist church was well attended, despite the stormy weather. The meeting opened with Ralph Cunningham, president, in the chair, who conducted a short business meeting, after which the meeting was turned over to C. E. Parker, chairman of the evening. Piano solos were given by John Poole, which were followed by the talk of W. A. Willis. Willis gave a most interesting account of his trip as a seaman around the world in 1888 and told of conditions as they were then.

He started with Gibraltar, and spoke particularly of a church that was conducted there by four women, each of different denominations. One was an Episcopalian, one a Presbyterian, another a Methodist and one a Congregationalist.

He then told his audience of visiting France, Italy, Constantinople, Egypt and cities of the Orient giving interesting details of each.

It was in Hongkong that he first saw the Boxer rebellion. He, along with 850 others, were sent to Peking to protect the American Embassy there.

Willis stated that the Boxers in China were what the Minute Men of 1776 were to the United States.

The women who served the dinner were Mesdames: C. R. G. Poole, E. Benkley and E. R. Melton.

USE TELEPHONES TO DESPATCH TOBOGGANS

New System Put Into Operation at Winter Resorts of the Bavarian Alps

The great toboggan slides in the Bavarian Alps are often miles in length, and the toboggans on some slopes attain a speed of over a mile a minute. A spill, even at such a speed, does little harm to those who are hurried from their seats into the soft snow, but there is danger of serious accident to both parties if another tobogganload, following too close behind, crashes into the first before they have picked themselves up and gotten clear of the track.

To forestall such possibilities in the future, electric block signals, similar to those used on railroads, have been installed on all the principal slides. Red and green lights notify the starters at the top when to allow the next toboggan to start down. And as the best means of patrolling the entire slide, a private telephone system connects all stations along the line. This follows the modern practice of railroad operation in America, where the telephone is used more and more for the dispatching of trains.

CANDLE, ALASKA, BOASTS NORTHERNMOST EXCHANGE

The farthest telephone north in the territory belonging to the United States is way up in Alaska, some 100 miles above Kotzebue Sound on the Kobuk river. It belongs to the farthest north telephone exchange at Candle, Alaska, which connects with Nome, Deering, Hayssock and Keewalik. Owing to the severity of the Arctic winters, the Kobuk river is closed from October 1 to June 1, and communication except by dog team is possible only by telephone. During the summer months a boat on the river makes regular trips, but without the telephone this section would have little contact with the outside world in winter.

BANDITS HEAD IS HUNTED BY CHICAGO POLICE

(By Universal Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—The head of Villa the bandit was being hunted in Chicago today. A Mexico city despatch said the head had been sent here by scientists.

Customs agents and postoffice clerks were charged with carefully inspecting every parcel received from the southwest. It was believed possible an attempt would be made to smuggle the head in by parcel post.

Criminologists discussed the value of Villa's head, among them was Dr. James Whitney Hall. "There has been talk of getting hold of Villa's head for study," he said. "We would be interested in seeing what the bumps show."

Villa was one of the greatest bandit leaders of our day, and of course, that fact gives his head scientific value.

Dr. Hall, while admitting that he and his fellow scientists would be interested in examining Villa's head, disclaimed any knowledge of the reported decoration of Villa's grave in Chihuahua, Mexico, early this month.

The grave was found opened and the head of the bandit missing. A note left at the grave said the head had been taken by Americans and would be removed to Columbus, N. M., where Villa staged his raid in 1916 that resulted in the American troops under General Pershing, coming into Mexico.

The American forces had orders to "Get Villa" but before the bandit was run down President De La Huerta issued an ultimatum to the United States that stopped the expedition a few miles south of the Rio Grande.

After the Mexican revolution Francisco Villa quit the life of a bandit and settled on an estate near Parral. In 1923 while leaving Parral in an automobile he was ambushed and slain.

The scheduled time for the Chicago-New York night trip is 7 1/2 hours.

BURKE COUNCIL HOLDS MEETING

A short business session was held last night by the Burke council, No. 699, Y. M. I. Joseph Silva was in charge of the meeting.

Plans were made for a St. Patrick ball, but as yet no definite plans have been laid.

"I was at that time as one before my time—as one crying in the wilderness." The idea of cultivating a "jungle forest tree" was looked upon as not less than visionary.

"A drawing of mine, however, attracted the attention of Sir Joseph Hooker, of Kew," said Sir Henry. "This drawing of leaf first ever made from nature. Sir Joseph was able to determine botanically the tree producing Para rubber, and he interested Sir Clements Markham, of the India office, and so a commission for the introduction of the tree which produced the true Para rubber of commerce was given by the Government of India."

BRINGING IT HOME

Sir Henry relates how one day in the Amazon district he found that the liner had been abandoned by two super-cargoes and left on the captain's hands.

"I chartered the ship," he said, "got village maids to make baskets for the rubber seeds and, working against time, had them taken aboard and got 'immediate dispatch' from the authorities for 'exceedingly delicate botanical specimens specially designated for delivery to Her Britannic Majesty's own Royal Gardens of Kew.'"

At Kew—this was in 1876 they had to turn out orchid and propagating houses for service, and a fortnight later the glass houses at Kew afforded the sight of 70,000 young rubber plants, tier upon tier. They were later sent to Ceylon. And a great Para rubber industry has since risen to world-wide importance.

For half a century Sir Henry was exploring and acting as a pioneer planter in the equatorial belt—East and West in Central America, Orinoco, the Amazon country, Australia, New Guinea, the Pacific Islands, and other places. He is now nearly 80 years of age.

FIRMS SHOULD AID EMPLOYEES IN THRIFT PRACTICES

By S. W. STRAUS, President American Society for Thrift.

THE newspapers recently have been giving considerable space to the outlines of various welfare and thrift plans made use of by business organizations for the benefit of their employees.

It is constantly becoming more apparent that one of the best ways to help others is to offer them practical encouragement.

In thrift practices, this idea is being carried out in various ways. Some organizations are helping their employees build and own their own homes; others are encouraging them in the ownership of stock in the organization where they are employed, and still others are carrying out plans by which employees are able to save a considerable sum of money as they go along.

It is an encouraging sign of the times that business interests are taking an increased interest in the personal progress of the members of their organizations.

To be happy and successful in business requires happiness and success in the home.

Thus business organizations which encourage thrift among their employees are in turn reaping the rewards of greater efficiency. But this is not to be viewed from the standpoint of selfishness. While the company secures benefits from the thrift of its employees, the community, the nation and society in general are likewise benefited. The establishment of a thrifty family in a community is always an added force to the progress of that community.

It is to be hoped that, with the development of the new year, a growing number of business organizations will see the wisdom and value of encouraging thrift among their members.

If this could become a generally accepted practice throughout the business world, it would make 1926 the greatest year for progress in the history of our country.

BULL FIGHT IS LOSING OUT IN MEXICO CITY

By ROBERT A. HERFORD (By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—It would seem as though our southern neighbors, the Mexican El Senors, are as much divided in their sports opinions as they are in their political views. The state is its federalists and revolutionaries; and sportswomen witnesses a continual dispute between the old guard or bull fight party and the younger element which is championing basketball and baseball. The leaders of the latter group are usually young Mexicans who have learned to love the American games while attending school in the States.

This condition was brought home in a striking manner to a party of us who recently paid a visit to the land of Tortillas and torreadors.

In Monterey, Mexico's Chicago, we met Senor Vargas, a sports writer on a local paper. Senor Vargas also conducted gym classes in a club which would correspond to one of our Y. M. C. A's. In excellent English young Senor Vargas told us that he had gone to college in St. Louis and New York.

"It would surprise you," said the youthful sports writer, "to see how many thousands of boys here are learning basketball and baseball. And the number that are playing soccer football. It is too hot for rugby. On a Sunday, especially in Summer—the off season in bull-fighting—a soccer match will draw two or even three thousand. And they like the gymnasium, too, with the swimming."

We were at the time standing in one of these gymnasiums. In the pool a group of Mexican boys were displaying some of the grace of their older brothers, the matadors, as they performed some clever diving feats.

"Yes," said young Senor Vargas thoughtfully in answer to our question. "I think that the new sports, baseball and basketball will soon rival the bull fight in Mexico."

In Mexico City, the southern New York and the home of the "Largest Plaza de Torros" in the world—the Mexican Boyle's Thirty Acres where the great bull fights are staged, we heard another opinion.

We were ourselves at the bull fight and a matador had just completed a pretty piece of work, dropping the bull with a single thrust as we put our question. "Baseball and football rival bull-fighting in Mexico?" exclaimed the editor of El Universal Tarino, one of the foremost of Bull Fighting periodicals. "Never in the World." El Senor Editor is a leading bull fight critic who might correspond to such sports authorities as Damon Runyon and Grantland Rice at home.

We quickly changed the subject. "Do you think that Bull fighting will ever spread to the United States?"

"Yes," said the El Senor Editor confidently. "In time I think the United States will adopt bull fighting. In Texas and California the bull fight has friends. And," concluded the El Senor Editor, "the fact that Sidney Franklin, the American youth from Brooklyn, has become a successful matador will not hurt bull fighting in the states."

British Explorer Tells of Early Rubber Business

(By Universal Service)

LONDON, Feb. 11.—While Americans are grumbling at the price of rubber at the moment it is worth recalling that the enterprise of hardy and far-seeing British pioneers was responsible for the invaluable India rubber, which is so extensively used today.

Sir Henry Wickham, the veteran pioneer of rubber-growing, has given permission to publish details of how he first introduced to the British authorities the possibilities of Para Indian rubber. This rubber is now grown largely in Ceylon and Malaya.

His personal working acquaintance with the tropical American rubber forest trees stretches back into the sixties, but as he says,

Sixteen are Dead In Snowstorm

(By Universal Service)
BOSTON, Feb. 11.—Sixteen are dead in snowdrifts, three ships blown ashore—intense suffering among seamen, who had to be rescued by the coast guard. That was today's toll of the storm in New England. All through today the telegraph wires brought news of intense suffering. The majority of those dead were night workers who became lost at night.

Ostrich Falls In Thames, Is Rescued By An Egyptian

(By Universal Service)

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The unusual sight of a 9 foot ostrich swimming in the Thames was seen at Tilbury.

While the ostrich, which was caged in a crate, was hoisted by a crane to the dock from the liner Clan Empress, the bird got excited and rocked the crate, with the result that one side of the crate gave way and the bird fell into the Thames.

An Egyptian attendant, named Mustafa Marmot, dived into the river and endeavored to reach the ostrich, which was swimming with great strokes of its long legs. The current was too strong, however, and the man would have been carried out into mid-river but for ropes which were thrown to him from the vessel.

Holding on to one he managed to pass another around the body of the ostrich, and the bird was then hauled safely to the quay.

It soon recovered from the shock.

Officers Named For Power Co.

(By Universal Service)

FRESNO, Feb. 11.—A. G. Wishon, power pioneer of the San Joaquin valley, was re-elected president, and A. Emory Wishon was re-elected vice-president and general manager at the meeting of the San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation here today.

Other members of the new directorate are: J. B. Black, Murray Bourne, F. L. Dame, president of the North American company; W. E. Lurley, F. W. Doolittle, Guy C. Earl, H. P. Wilson, president of the Western Power Corporation; Edwin Gruhl, Al C. Joy, William B. Joyce and E. P. Smith. W. E. Lurley was named secretary and assistant treasurer; Ernest E. Bohr, treasurer and controller.

In his annual report, President Wishon reported that the company had enjoyed one of the most prosperous years in its history. That substantial savings had been effected in power generation, and that general economic conditions in the San Joaquin valley were vastly improved.

Wishon declared that there is a constantly increasing demand for power.

Infernal Machine For a Cow Is the Newest Invention

(By Universal Service)

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—An infernal machine for a cow is the latest invention.

Col. Harry Mullins, M. P. for Marquette, received a strange parcel in the mail a few days ago. It was a metal object, consisting of an iron plate about five inches square, through which a leather strap was drawn. To the plate was attached a sort of cylinder, set on a powerful spring.

There was no explanation of its purpose, and the Colonel was suspicious of an infernal machine. Next day, however, he received a letter from one of his constituents. He wanted his parliamentary representative to interview manufacturers and get the thing on the market. It was a cow tail holder. You strap the contrivance to your knee which you go to milk, and clamp the cow's tail to the spring device. Thereafter the cow cannot swat you in the ear with her tail.

Use Artificial Rain On Royal Ascot Park

LONDON, Feb. 11.—There will be no more "hard going" at Royal Ascot, regarded as the finest race-course in the world, and the Mecca of crowds of wealthy Americans at the height of the London season.

To establish and maintain ideal conditions for horse racing, artificial rain is now to be used whenever climatic conditions are such to over-heat and harden the course. The new system of watering may be described as overhead irrigation.

Several miles of waterpipes have been laid in shallow trenches on both sides of the course parallel with and outside the rails. At intervals hydrants will rise above ground from the pipes. Whenever it is necessary to water the course a special spraying apparatus will be attached to each hydrant so that showers will reach every part of the track and ensure the turf receiving a gentle yet thorough soaking. This artificial rain will be turned on only after nightfall.
